Happy Pi Day

Pi equals approximately 3.14159... Pi is a special ratio that was found to be in every circle and it is used on the circumference of a circle and also the area of the circle. We enjoyed celebrating Pi Day at GAB. This year our theme was baseball. Baseball has so much math involved in the sport itself, and certainly has a ton of circles in it as well. You can use the baseball and find all the measurements of that sphere a.k.a. a 3D circle. You can cut the end of the bat & have another circle and don't forget the pitcher's mound is also a circle.

They celebrated with popcorn and baseball music, hula hoops etc. We even had circle and baseball trivia on the news.
